

I am appalled to learn that Sinclair is among the media giants that demonstrate the dangers of broadcasting consolidation. How dare you presume to air a so-called "documentary" that clearly portrays Senator Kerry in a negative light, and do so right before an election?

Sinclair has free use of the public airwaves and is obligated to serve the public interest. But when large companies control the airwaves, we get more partisan news and less of what we need as a democracy. What happened to the ideal of objective journalism, much less "fair and balanced?"

I now associate Sinclair--of whom I formerly knew nothing--with lack of principals, inordinate clout and abuse of power. I'm also disgusted to learn that you refused to air Michael Moore's anti-Bush documentary in response to the character-bashing of Senator Kerry.

The FCC is either sleeping or being paid off if they don't see the need to strengthen licensing rules. This debacle illustrates why the license renewal process needs to involve more than a returned postcard. Thank you.
